CompanyFormationWiki
The free encyclopedia of company formation
companyformationwiki.com

Editorial policy

From CompanyFormationWiki, the free encyclopedia of company formation · Last updated 25 November 2026

CompanyFormationWiki is an independent reference on starting and running companies. This page explains how articles are researched, checked and kept up to date.

How articles are researched

- Figures such as tax rates, capital requirements and thresholds come from official government and registry websites, and from the published tax summaries of major accounting firms.
- Every article lists the sources it relies on under References, with the date they were consulted.
- Where sources disagree, we prefer the official source and say so in the text.

Dates and updates

- Every article shows a Last updated date, which changes only when the content changes.
- Country guides are reviewed at least twice a year, and promptly when a tax rate or registration rule changes.
- Figures that change often carry an “as of” date in the text.

Independence

Articles are written for readers, not advertisers. Mentions of registries, authorities or service providers are not endorsements, and national symbols are shown for identification only.

Not advice

Articles are general information, not legal or tax advice. See the disclaimer.

Source: https://companyformationwiki.com/editorial-policy/
Version: last updated 25 November 2026. Check the online version for later changes.

© 2026 CompanyFormationWiki. CompanyFormationWiki is a free encyclopedia of company formation, business structures and international tax across 222 jurisdictions. General information, not legal or tax advice. Confirm with the official registry, the tax authority or a qualified adviser before acting.